What does Memorial Day mean to you?

Boston celebrated Memorial Day on Monday with ceremonies around the city. / DEREK KOUYOUNJIAN

Patriotism. Boston marked Monday's holiday with American pride.

Memorial Day marks the harbinger of Summer, and is a national day of outdoor grilling and gatherings. But most importantly, it is a day to acknowledge the debt of gratitude owed to those who have kept the nation safe.

Both Boston and Cambridge paid tribute to the local heroes who fought to defend our freedom on Monday with a parade and a memorial gathering on the Common.

People gathered in Harvard Square and marched to the Cambridge Cemetery in celebration of the men and women in the armed forces. Marching bands, veterans, and active duty military members gathered joined families and friends on the Cambridge Common at about 9:30 a.m. for the cannon blast salute by the Massachusetts Bicentennial Battery.

Some 37,000 American flags were planted on the Boston Common for the fallen soldiers of Massachusetts in a magnificent display of patriotism.

Summer had finally come following the worst winter in memory, and people of all ages came out in droves on a perfect day to honor the brave men and women of our armed forces.

"As a combat veteran myself, we have a lot of combat vets in the Dirty Water Crew. Memorial Day means to me, it's special to remember the guys who didn't make it home. So anything we can do to support our troops."

Steve Thompson

"Memorial Day is basically the remembrance of what we live today for and who had made it that way. The same reason why we take and remember Jesus for those who believe that Jesus existed."

Wayne Robinson

"It means that they're very special, the people who died in the war. My papa [great grandfather] fought World War II and Korea."

Decency gets the boot: Donations stolen from Boylston firehouse

Ripped off. It's not the first time someone has made off with a boot full of charity cash.

Engine 33 on Boylston Street
DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

A low move soiled the beauty of Memorial Day for Boston Fire Department Engine 33 and Ladder 15: On Saturday night, someone stole the famous charity boot that was placed outside the station.

"It has happened before, not just here but at other firehouses all over the city, state, country," said Lt. JR Ortiz. "This might happen every other year or so at this firehouse."

The firefighter boot is used to collect money for the Walsh-Kennedy Memorial Fund and the Muscular Dystrophy Association was bolted to the ground and weighed about 50 pounds, leaving firefighters to believe that there was more than one person involved in what was a planned theft.

The donations display

"A lot of the money goes to the Muscular Dystrophy Association and to help a lot of families in Massachusetts who are wheelchair-bound," Ortiz said. "It's there to help find a cure and to help the kids as they're growing up in the trials they go through."

The money collected goes to two charities: one for muscular dystrophy and the other to the Walsh-Kennedy Memorial Fund established for Lt. Ed Walsh and firefighter Michael Kennedy, who were killed in the massive fire at 298 Beacon Street in March 2014.

"You hear about these things happening all over, but it's rare and it's pretty low," Ortiz said.

Memorial Day tends to be a good day for collection as it brings more foot traffic to the Boylston Street area, fire officials said. The firefighters did not know how much money was in the display at the time of the theft.

The Boston Fire Department tweeted: "This act is the rare exception to how supportive the people are."

Crime. 7-year-old boy recovering after being shot while riding bike in DOT

A 7-year-old boy was recovering Monday after he was shot while riding his bicycle in Dorchester on Sunday. The Boston Globe reported.

Divan Silva, of Brockton, and a 20-year-old man were shot near Johnny's Barber Shop on Bowdoin Street, police said.

Silva was shot in the rear around 4:15 p.m. then taken to Boston Children's Hospital, where a spokeswoman initially said he was in serious condition.

The man, who remains unidentified, was grazed in the head by the shot and was taken to Boston Medical Center. Police say five bullets were fired in total.

The suspect is still at large, police said. He is described as a man with light complexion wearing a red sweatshirt, standing 5-feet-7. The suspect was on foot when he opened fire.

THE POLS TAKE A HOLIDAY

The Foreman forecast

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN PREDICTS THIS WEEK IN POLITICS. HE IS A CNN CORRESPONDENT AND AUTHOR OF THE UPCOMING BOOK "MY YEAR OF RUNNING DANGEROUSLY: A DAD, A DAUGHTER, AND A RIDICULOUS PLAN."

Nothing will get done in the Capitol this week because Congress will be enjoying a nice long holiday break. Mind you, nothing would get done if they were at work either, but that's a different matter. As I predicted here last week, our esteemed lawmakers let the Patriot Act debate burn down to the wire despite knowing the deadline was coming for months. So here are three things to look for this week in politics.

1. Badminton with Hillary:

Whether candidate Clinton likes it or not, she'd better get ready to handle some wicked volleys from her critics. Even the long weekend won't quiet the fury over the release of her emails from the State Department.

Yes, those emails: the ones she used for public business, but kept on a private server in her home. Three hundred came out late last week. Roughly 30,000 more are still pending—enough to keep Republicans clucking about her secret ways for months.

2. Whirlwind tour:

What's the single most important thing a lame duck president can do for his party? If you answered "Secure his legacy" um ... no. "Raise money?" Now you're thinking like a politician! President Obama will make a Miami swing to rustle up some bucks down in alligator alley. He'll also whip by the National Hurricane Center to check out this year's summer storm forecast. Apparently Dylan was wrong. You do need a weatherman to know which way the wind blows.

3. Republican rodeo:

And GOPers will be out beating the bushes for money, headlines and support too. Among others, watch for Sen. Rand Paul in Chicago complaining about liberal policies, and former New York Gov. George Pataki declaring his candidacy for the presidential nomination because he's always wanted to — and after all, everyone else is doing it.

STREET FLOODING IN ABILENE, TEXAS

State of emergency declared in Texas, more severe weather expected

The governor of Texas on Monday declared states of disaster in 24 counties, citing the severe weather and flash flooding that have killed at least two people.

The state has been pounded by tornadoes, heavy rainfall, thunderstorms and flooding that forced evacuations and rooftop rescues and left thousands of residents without electrical power.

In declaring the states of disaster in 24 counties, Gov. Greg Abbott said: "The state of Texas has taken brisk action in dispatching all available resources to aid those affected by this severe weather system."

"My thoughts and prayers are with all the communities that are suffering as a result of this weather disaster, and I am grateful for the first responders who have worked tirelessly to provide shelter, care and resources to all impacted areas," he said. REUTERS

Malaysia finds 139 graves in 'cruel' jungle trafficking camps

Malaysia has found 139 graves, and signs of torture, in more than two dozen squalid human trafficking camps suspected to have been used by gangs smuggling migrants across the border with Thailand, the country's police chief said.

The dense jungles of southern Thailand and northern Malaysia have been a major stop-off point for smugglers bringing people to Southeast Asia by boat from Myanmar, most of them Rohingya Muslims who say they are fleeing persecution, and Bangladesh.

The grisly find follows the discovery of similar shallow graves on the Thai side of the border earlier this month. REUTERS

Charter nears $55B deal for Time Warner Cable: Sources

Time Warner Cable is nearing an agreement to be acquired by smaller peer Charter Communications Inc for about $55 billion, combining the second- and third-largest U.S. cable operators, people familiar with the matter said on Monday.

The cash and stock deal values Time Warner Cable at $195 per share, according to the sources, and comes just one month after Comcast Corp dropped its $45.2 billion merger agreement with Time Warner Cable, clinched in February 2014, over antitrust concerns. REUTERS

Volcano erupts on Galapagos island, imperils pink iguanas

A volcano perched atop one of Ecuador's Galapagos Islands erupted in the early hours of Monday, the National Park said, potentially threatening a unique species of pink iguanas.

The roughly 1.1-mile-high Wolf volcano is located on Isabela Island, home to a rich variety of flora and fauna typical of the archipelago that helped inspire Charles Darwin's theory of evolution following his 1835 visit.

"This is the only population of pink iguanas in the world," The Galapagos National Park said on Twitter. REUTERS

Authorities detonate suspicious device near Capitol

U.S. authorities on Sunday blew up a pressure cooker found in a vehicle parked near the U.S. Capitol and later arrested the vehicle's owner.

Pressure cooker bombs were used to kill three people and injured more than 250 others at the Boston Marathon in April 2013.

U.S. Capitol police officers on routine patrol found the suspicious vehicle on 3rd Street across from the Capitol's west lawn, spokeswoman Lt. Kimberly Schneider said. They found the pressure cooker and also detected the odor of gasoline.

The Capitol Police's Hazardous Devices Section closed off nearby streets and disrupted the items of concern in the vehicle. REUTERS

Emma Stone and Andrew Garfield spotted together

Rumors has it the break Emma Watson and Andrew Garfield had been taking from their relationship is all done, since they've been spotted enjoying some meals together in L.A., and now this: Paparazzi caught the pair out grocery shopping, and I think we all know what that signifies. I mean, I know a Ralph's supermarket in Malibu isn't the most romantic venue, but they were holding hands, man. It was the first time they'd been photographed together since January. "It was always a 'break' due to schedules," a source assures E! News. "They care for each other and always have the best time when together." Even at the grocery store, apparently.

John Stamos 'heartbroken' about the Olsen twins news

So those reports last week that Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen had come around on the upcoming Netflix "Full House" reboot? Yeah, not so much. And if you think you're broken up about it, check out John Stamos. First he simply tweeted the hashtag "heartbroken" before heading to Facebook.

"Just so you reporters know, this is not a money gig for any of us. Quite the opposite," he wrote. "Sad that a few don't share the rest of the cast's opinion."

You don't got it, dude.

Stop asking Katy Perry about her ex-husband, OK?

Sheesh. You marry one famous comedian who then divorces you 14 months later, and reporters will never let you hear the end of it. Katy Perry is still getting questions about Russell Brand three years after their split, and she's had enough. "He hasn't spoken to me since he texted me saying he was filing for divorce," she tells the Daily Telegraph. "I don't want to talk about him. My songs will say what I need to say." So quit it, all right?

Guys, seriously, cut it out.

DAENERYS AND TYRION MEET AT LAST

Episode MVPs

One of the criticisms leveled at this season of "Game of Thrones" is that it's been too slow. And indeed, the show has moved at a more deliberate pace compared to last year. "The Gift," however, propelled several plotlines forward, starting with the one surrounding Cersei Lannister in King's Landing.

All season long, Cersei has been manipulating a fanatic religious group called the Sparrows into doing her dirty work. As an organization that exists to punish the wicked, it was inevitable that the Sparrows would eventually turn on Cersei, who's done plenty of horrible things but always thought herself too sly to get caught. She steps into a trap of her own making this week, and it was satisfying to finally see her many misdeeds catch up with her.

Meanwhile, across the Narrow Sea, Tyrion Lannister and Daenerys Targaryen met for the first time. This is a watershed moment for the series, and one that puts it ahead of the books. With the possible exception of Jon Snow, Tyrion and Daenerys are the two most important characters in the story, and the prospect of an alliance between them opens up all kinds of possibilities.

Our watch for next week begins

Up in the North, things were in a bit of a holding pattern, with Stannis marching on Winterfell and Sansa exploring ways to escape her frightening new marriage to Ramsay Bolton. These plotlines are on a collision course, but it may take another episode or two to get there.

With the finale almost in sight, it's time to start looking back and evaluating how Season 5 will fit into the overall show. The measured pacing some fans have complained of was actually pretty common of "Game of Thrones" prior to Season 4, and the producers have done a great job maneuvering the pieces into place so the final chunk of episodes hits with maximum force. The next few weeks should be quite a ride.

Win two tickets to see Rihanna

Don't miss out. Be a part of Rihanna's latest project. Yes, the pop superstar is joining up with us to offer our readers an incredible, mind-blowing prize.

Rihanna is known for her cheeky Instagram snaps, and now, with the help of Metro International, she's teasing her fans with the release of her eighth studio album.

While the exact drop date is RiRi's own little secret, the singer has teamed with us for an exclusive global competition pegged to her much-anticipated upcoming record.

Together, we are offering you the chance to win a trip for two to see Rihanna live in concert in Philadelphia later this year with a slew of other goodies, like two nights in a hotel. You might say it has star quality written all over it.

All you have to do is let your creativity inspire you and design a mood board to show how you would put together Rihanna's next music video, dress or movie. So, whatever kind of creative you are — whether it's through pictures, art or words — bring together your most artistic images, sketches, cuttings and anything in between.

Remember, you don't have to stick to just music: The superstar singer, as well as being a red carpet fashion staple, has collaborated with River Island, Armani and, most recently, Puma. And don't forget, the Bajan-born musician has also graced Hollywood, lending her voice to the DreamWorks animated film "Home."

Yes, Rihanna's "American Oxygen" lyrics, "sweat for a nickel and a dime" only to "turn it into an empire," ring true for the hitmaker's career. Now it's your turn to get "hustlin'" and enter this one-of-a-kind competition via the Metro US Facebook fan page. The winners will be revealed June 29. MWN

What does the competition winner get?

The lucky winner, whose mood board wows Rihanna the most, will score the following grand prize:

Prepare your finest act: 'AGT' is back

Interview. "America's Got Talent" judge Heidi Klum is ready for a new season of the talent show.

The TV world sometimes seems to have 10 reality competitions for every specialty, whether it's cooking, singing or designing clothing. But "America's Got Talent" is the rare show that is looking for almost any kind of talent. Contestants can audition with whatever they're good at, whether it's singing or something more unusual, like magic tricks. The show returns tonight with a new season of talented hopefuls, with judges Heidi Klum, Howard Stern, Mel B and Howie Mandel weighing in on their skills, with some help from host Nick Cannon. We got the skinny from Klum on tips for people auditioning, and what talent she'd showcase if she were auditioning.

Do you find you prefer certain types of acts over others?

I love being surprised! Anyone who comes onstage and can really shock me with a new and interesting talent that I've never seen before always gets my vote. I do also love the kids that come on our stage. They put their little hearts and souls into their performances, and

Catch Klum on the premiere of "America's Got Talent" tonight at 8 p.m. on NBC. / ISABELLA VOSMIKOVA, NBC

I'm always wowed by what they are capable of.

What advice do you have for people considering an audition?

Always be true to yourself. Do what makes you happy. Don't come audition with some talent that you think will get the most laughs or claps. Do what you love and stick to it. Master that. The audience loves to see people who love what they're doing. Maybe also ask a really honest, close friend for feedback before you come on.

Do you find yourself getting caught up in the stories of the performers?

You definitely listen to some of the stories and feel for what the contestants have been through, but ultimately, it's a talent competition. They have to show us what they can do and why they deserve to be a million-dollar act in Vegas.

As a judge, what kind of feedback do you think is important to pass on to people?

A lot of people come onstage and forget to connect with the audience. Performing is all about forming that connection.

Auditions

Secret skills

If you were going to audition for the show, what skill would you show off?

People always ask me to yodel. I don't think I would necessarily audition as a yodeler, but we did have a yodeling granny this season, and I gave her a run for her money!

The viewers at home are voting. You want to show them your special sauce.

What performance has most surprised you?

We had a guy on the show who called himself The Regurgitator. I don't want to spoil too much, but I think the name really speaks for itself. I was amazed. There are almost no words to describe it because I have never seen anything like it before, and neither have you!

Amazing life advice from five commencement speakers

The words of wisdom from these recent commencement speeches are helpful for everyone, not just new graduates.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

It's a scary time for graduates to charge into the real world. There's the economy, global warming and racial violence. That's when a great commencement speech can really help. The best ones so far this year haven't avoided the issues of the day but addressed them head-on, offering hope, inspiration and purpose.

First Lady Michelle Obama

Tuskegee University

"Our history provides us with a better story, a better blueprint for how we can win. It teaches us that when we pull ourselves out of those lowest emotional depths, and we channel our frustrations into studying and organizing and banding together — then we can build ourselves and our communities up. We can take on those deep-rooted problems, and together — together — we can overcome anything that stands in our way."

Apple CEO Tim Cook

George Washington University

"The one thing I'd like to bring to you is the idea that progress is possible [in] whatever line of work you choose. There will always be cynics and critics on the sidelines tearing people down, and just as harmful are those people with good intentions who make no contribution at all. In his letter from the Birmingham jail, Dr. King wrote that our society needed to repent not merely for the hateful words of the bad people but for the appalling silence of the good people."

Scientist Bill Nye

Rutgers University

"The oncoming trouble is climate change: It is going to affect you all in the same way the Second World War consumed people of my parents' generation. They rose to the challenge, and so will you. They came to be called The Greatest Generation. I want you all to preserve our world in the face of climate change and carry on as The Next Great Generation."

Actress Maya Rudolph

Tulane University

"If I must give any of you advice, it would be to say yes. Say yes — and create your own destiny.

So hold on to your old friends. Kiss your mama. Admit what your dreams are. Don't beat yourself up if you don't know what you're going to do tomorrow, but work hard and don't be lazy. And put away your damn phone once in a while. Be nice to jerks because we still don't know the criteria for getting into heaven yet."

Comedian Stephen Colbert

Wake Forest University

"And if there's one thing you need even more, it's your own set of standards. It may seem counterintuitive now, but once you leave here, you may miss being graded on all your work. Because when you're out of school, there are no objective criteria for achievement anymore. People my age will sometimes say to you, 'Hey, that work you did, that thing you said, that cause you championed, it's not good.' Well, having your own standards will help you weather moments like that. Having your own standards allows you to perceive success where others may see failure."

How to be happy at a job you hate

Laszlo Bock, the head of people operations at Google and the author of "Work Rules!" gives four tips on how to make the most of your job.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

Having your dream job is a luxury most people don't have, but that doesn't mean you have to spend your eight-hour shift miserable, counting down until happy hour. If anyone knows a thing or two about making work fun, it's Laszlo Bock, the head of people operations at Google. Here are a few of his tips:

Assume the best in people

If you think your boss is a jerk or one of your co-workers has a bad attitude, Bock says it helps to remember that everyone has stuff going on in their personal lives, and he or she could be projecting that at work.

"If someone comes into a meeting looking angry and drops their bag, we tend to think, 'Well, that person is a real jerk.' We don't assume maybe their dog is sick, or he or she has all these stressful things going on," Bock says. It's certainly better than the alternative, assuming everyone is a terrible human being. "Assuming the best in people is a much nicer way to live," Bock says.

Focus on the few things you do like

Bock suggests "job crafting," making a list of everything you do at work and shifting your time to focus on the Boss driving you nuts? At least pretend to like him, and it will subconsciously help. iStock things you most enjoy. "Even if [realistically] you aren't able to change your job, the simple act of making that list makes you more aware of the things you enjoy, and that will make you happier and more productive," he says.

Express gratitude

It turns out, acting happy at work even when you aren't, and being nice to your co-workers even if they secretly annoy you, can make you actually feel happier.

Bock says even devoting just a few minutes a day to outwardly expressing gratitude will really lift your mood.

"It can be as simple as writing thank-you emails or sitting and reflecting on things you enjoy and things you feel happy about," he says. "Just focusing on the few [parts] of the day you're grateful for or thanking other people has a positive effect."

Realize no one loves their job all the time

Bock says even he has days when his job is not fun. "There's no job that will make you deliriously happy all the time. That's why people get paid to work," he says. "Especially when you are early in your career, it's important to remember that. And it gets better."

Laszlo Bock is the author of "Work Rules!" and the head of people operations at Google. ERIC LAURITA

How to land a job at Google

Over 2 million résumés cross Bock's desk each year from people hoping to work at Google.

Some do pretty crazy things to stand out. "I got a robot in the mail the other day," he tells us. It turns out, you don't have to go to extreme lengths to get his attention. Here's what he looks for when going through résumés:

1 Spellcheck. "It sounds basic, but make sure you don't have any mistakes on your résumé. It's too easy of a way for a recruiter to reject you."

2 Be specific. "Describe what you accomplished, why and how it was measured. Instead of just saying you were employee of the month, say 'I was awarded employee of the month as a result of high customer satisfaction,' or 'I ranked 10th out of the 50 top associates in the first six months of the year.'"

3 Play up your experience. "Several years ago, [recruiters] focused on where you went to school and your grades, but we stopped caring about that stuff because none of that has actually proven how you're going to perform." Instead, use your résumé to show what you've done related to the job you're applying for.

Letters to the editor

A memorable tableau

This one is for the five grown men and women I saw sitting on Broadway this morning in Somerville. You had red cups in hand, drunk at 7 in the morning, cheerfully and loudly proclaiming that you had the day off for Memorial Day. This one is especially for the short-haired, curly blonde woman I saw drunkenly preaching to the high school students walking by that they should spend the weekend appreciating the people who have been in our armed services and died for our country, while your friends laughed at you and you laughed at yourself. I hope you're reading this, because did you happen to know that while you were laughing over your booze, you were sitting right across the street from a residential veteran's program, where men and women are trying to fight alcoholism and addiction? Did you realize you were sitting across the street from a military veterans cemetery? Did you realize that the woman passing in front of you will spend this weekend mourning the loss of her first high school boyfriend, a Marine, and her deceased Navy grandfather? This one is for all five of you, because clearly you have no true idea of the meaning of the Memorial Day holiday. KIRA VAUGHN

How to 'help'

Re: 'Marathon bombing verdict' (Metro, May 21) How tragic that this man was able to fool our society by playing two irreconcilable roles, plant explosive devices to the demise of many, assassinate a police officer in cold blood, and drive over his dying brother's body? Where exactly do we start the helping? Perhaps by stopping to divide our world into sub-worlds, being vigilant about not getting "impressed" by lethal roles, allowing families and friends to mourn their loved ones, let the injured heal, and making our justice system function as intended by the U.S. Constitution?

Revolution playing steady ball ahead of Galaxy rematch

MLS. The Revs showed they are a resilient bunch in a tie against D.C. United.

Even in soccer, a sport that has far too many ties, it is rare to see a team celebrate such a routine occurrence. The circumstances surrounding New England's (5-3-5) 1-1 draw with D.C. United (6-2-4) on Saturday night at Gillette Stadium were quite unique since the Revolution picked up not one but two red cards in the second half. Defender Chris Tierney and midfielder Lee Nguyen got hit just six minutes apart. It meant that the Revs were playing two men down for the final 32-plus minutes. They understandably coughed up a 1-0 lead, but the fact that they could still earn a point against the top team in not only the Eastern Conference, but MLS, shows New England's superb will to win. It was a great sign in their biggest match of the season thus far against a club that they figure to be battling with all season long.

"I think that they only had one clear chance to score and they scored, that's a credit to D.C.," said Revolution head coach Jay Heaps. "You practice being down to 10 men but I've got to be honest with you, we don't practice being down to nine men, but we just had a 35-minute session [including stoppage time] so we're all right."

New England suffered a rare one-sided defeat, a 4-2 loss at Sporting KC (4-2-6) last Wednesday. All MLS teams have a few two-game weeks each season and the Revs saw their nine-game unbeaten streak end in a bizarre match. The Revolution actually led 1-0 on Juan Agudelo's goal in the 11th minute, but KC scored three times after that to take a commanding 3-1 halftime advantage. Heaps had given backup goalkeeper Brad Knighton his first start of the year while regular starters like Tierney, Teal Bunbury and Charlie Davies only appeared as substitutes. Star defender Andrew Farrell got the night off.

New England is unbeaten in its last 15 home matches (10-0-5) dating back to July 30, 2014.

The Revolution have another big showdown at Gillette this Sunday (7 p.m., FS1) against the LA Galaxy (4-4-5). It is the rematch of the 2014 MLS Cup, which LA won, 2-1, in overtime.

Sox stumble after strong weekend

After the Red Sox put together one of their most complete wins of the season Sunday against the Angels, they came back Monday and had a rough go of it on Memorial Day in Minnesota, falling to the Twins, 7-2, in the first of a three-game series.

Joe Kelly didn't stand a chance Monday as he was yanked in the second inning after allowed seven earned runs on eight hits. Trevor Plouffe's three-run homer in the second gave the Twins a 7-0 lead.

Mike Napoli stayed hot at the plate for the Red Sox as he had a pair of hits.

The Sox will look to bounce back Tuesday as they hand the ball to Clay Buchholz (2-5, 4.58 ERA). MATT BURKE change.

It should be noted that Sytch is not nearly as striking as she used to be (who is?!). But, from a straight nostalgia prospective, this would be right up there with seeing Hulk Hogan drop the leg on The Rock.

Forever Deflating

A "Free Tom Brady" rally took place at the Gillette Stadium parking lot on Sunday. Sure, it was mostly a convenient excuse to hold a football style tailgate in May and sure, there was ZERO chance that Roger Goodell was going to say, "Meh, let's call the whole thing off" after people with Pat Patriot picket signs walked around in circles on the Sunday of a holiday weekend, a solid 210 miles away from the league offices. But the folks that did hang out by an empty football stadium on one of the least heavy news cycle days of the calendar year did get one point across: this thing ain't dyin'.

Robert Kraft can give up. Tom Brady himself might even eventually settle for a one-game suspension. But Patriots fans are firmly at war with the other 31 fan bases. For every "Matt Walsh" and "Jim McNally in the bathroom" reference on an ESPN.com comment section, there is a Patriots fan ready to offer up a 2,576-word response on why video taping opposing team's signals was actually legal at the time (it's where the camera is placed, dummy) and how three-of-the four Colts balls checked at halftime of the AFC Championship Game were actually underinflated, too.

The "rhetoric" that Kraft talked about in his white flag press conference last week certainly isn't going away. There are thousand upon thousands of Colts, Jets, Steelers, Giants, Eagles, Panthers and Rams fans more than willing to keep the "conversation" with Pats fans going.

NHL

Tampa can bury Rangers tonight

It is not unfamiliar territory for these Rangers. Tuesday, it'll be one match to determine whether their season comes to an end or if they can force team sports' ultimate game.

"It's not like we haven't been there before," Henrik Lundqvist said after the Rangers were shutout, 2-0, by the Tampa Bay Lightning in Game 5 of the Eastern Conference Final. Tampa Bay leads the best-of-seven, 3-2. Game 6 is set for Tuesday (8 p.m., NBCSN) at Amalie Arena in Tampa.

It has become plainly evident that the Lightning are unlike any playoff opponent the Rangers have competed against in the Alain Vigneault era. Following Games 2 and 3, Tampa Bay's Triplets line had dominated the conversation. Following Game 5, the talk shifted to franchise cornerstone Steven Stamkos and goaltender Ben Bishop.

Stamkos finished the game with a goal and an assist, both occurring in a second period in which Tampa took control of the game. Despite a slight 6-4 advantage in shots on goal in the first, the Rangers were able to implement their forecheck and cycle game, and, as a result generated two power plays.

However, the Lightning essentially beat the Rangers at their own game in the last two periods. Tampa clogged the neutral zone and would not allow the Rangers to carry the puck into the offensive zone. And the Lightning's penalty kill units were significantly more aggressive in Game 5 than they had been in Games 2 and 4, as the Rangers went 0-for-4 with just four shots on the man advantage. DENIS GORMAN
